3Q26 preview

We estimate 3Q26 revenue at W946.8bn (+10.7% YoY, -21.0% QoQ), OP at W44.8bn (+51.7% YoY, -26.4% QoQ), and OPM at 4.7%. We expect revenue to meet consensus, but OP to fall short. As favorable exchange rate and LME copper price effects, which boosted 2Q26 earnings, moderate in 3Q26, the contribution of the materials segment to revenue and earnings in won terms will likely decline. Meanwhile, product mix is improving as revenue recognition from newly secured, high-margin, ultra-high-voltage (UHV) projects rises from 2H26. Although project schedules may cause quarterly fluctuations, we expect profitability in the extra-high-voltage segment to improve heading into 4Q26.

2027 forecast: shift to high-value mix centered on UHV cables, HVDC

We estimate 2027 revenue at W4.9863tn (+16.9% YoY), OP at W260.7bn (+20.2% YoY), and OPM at 5.2%. UHV/submarine cable revenue is expected to reach W1.31tn, outpacing overall revenue growth. In the US, expanding investment in transmission networks, including 230kV turnkey projects, will support growth. In Korea, the West Coast Energy Highway is expected to provide new order opportunities, building on the company's track record in the East Coast–East Seoul 500kV HVDC project. Following the acquisition of a cable-laying vessel, the commissioning of the second submarine cable plant will further strengthen EPC capabilities spanning production, transportation, and installation. We focus on the shift from materials and general-purpose cables toward a higher-value business mix centered on UHV cables, HVDC, and submarine cables.

We maintain BUY and our target price of W48,500. A rising share of high-margin UHV projects and the business transition toward HVDC and submarine cables are the key drivers of a mid- to long-term valuation re-rating, beyond near-term forex fluctuations.
