September monthly

September domestic ADTV contracts 19.0% MoM to W40.1tn

September average daily trading value (ADTV) fell 19.0% MoM to W40.1tn (KOSPI -24.5%, KOSDAQ +8.7%). Trading activity remains subdued as retail investor turnover continues to decline. However, KOSDAQ turnover improved MoM. Given current turnover levels, a gradual recovery is expected as investor sentiment improves.

Overseas securities settlement value declined 16.0% MoM, reflecting reduced trading activity amid the sluggish performance of overseas semiconductor and global space stocks.

Outstanding credit extended to customers rose 0.4% MoM to W59.0tn, driven by an increase in securities-backed loans, while outstanding margin loans declined 1.0% MoM. However, the rate of decline is moderating, and risk appetite is expected to gradually improve.

Customer deposits rose 8.0% MoM to W108.0tn. As these deposits represent funds available for equity investment, the rise in potential inflows is positive for the stock market.

Although daily average trading turnover decreased MoM in September, given the rebound in the KOSDAQ market's turnover ratio and the increase in margin financing and customer deposits, investor risk appetite seems to be gradually recovering. Currently, turnover ratios for both the KOSPI and KOSDAQ are at their trend lows, implying that further downside is limited. Moreover, we expect daily average trading turnover to recover gradually throughout 4Q26 after bottoming out in September.

Investment strategy

We maintain OVERWEIGHT on the securities sector as: 1) the stock market continues to recover, which should support an expansion in trading value; and 2) the retail trading portion remains in the low-50% range, suggesting that retail turnover ratio will likely increase. Although there are concerns over the heavy concentration in semiconductor stocks, we believe securities stocks have scope to rise, as their dividend appeal comes into focus and semiconductor concentration eases heading into year-end.

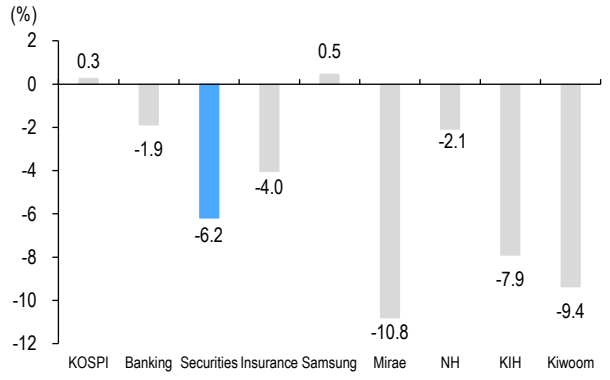

Top pick: Kiwoom Securities

Our sector top pick is Kiwoom Securities, given its high sensitivity to the KOSDAQ. The company's dividend yield stands at around 7.4%.
